UNDERGRADUATE NONCLINICAL INTERNSHIP
IN THE DEPARTMENT OF PSYCHOLOGY AT THE UNIVERSITY OF NEW HAMPSHIRE

A Manual for Interns and Supervisors

The UNH Psychology Department offers advanced undergraduate majors the opportunity to gain experience in the areas of psychology through a field placement program, Psychology 793 (Nonclinical Internship). In addition to providing students an opportunity to apply concepts and principles acquired in previous psychology courses to the world of work, the program facilitates career orientation, exploration, and definition. It also helps some students gain entry into programs of graduate education and/or employment in nonclinical areas of psychology.

Prerequisites for admission to the course are: psychology major, Psychology 402 Statistics in Psychology, Psychology 502 Research Methods, a 700 level course specific to one of the nonclinical internship areas, suitable nonclinical internship placement, and tentative learning agreement. Enrollment is limited to 15 students. Preference is given to seniors who submit an approved learning agreement by the announced deadline. Nonclinical Internship, Psychology 793 may count as either a Group I or Group II course, depending on the core focus area of the internship, and also fulfills the capstone requirement for psychology majors.

Overview

The program offers a broad range of educational experiences in nonclinical psychology. Nonclinical internship is divided into four core focus areas: Experimental Psychology, Human Factors & Engineering Psychology, Industrial & Organizational Psychology, and Sport & Performance Psychology. Work performed by interns is hands-on and supervised by personnel in the agency.

Within a general framework provided by the course syllabus and instructor, an intern tailors the field placement experiences to his/her own needs and interests and to the interests and expertise of the agency and agency supervisor. The experiences are guided by a learning agreement written by the intern in consultation with the supervisor. The instructor provides suggestions for agency placements, facilitates and encourages the intern’s understanding of concepts and theory related to psychology, is available for consultation with both the supervisor and intern, and coordinates the evaluation/grading of the intern. The nonclinical internship coordinator provides a contact between the University of New Hampshire Psychology Department and the nonclinical internship sites and oversees contracts between the University and the sites as well as between the student and the University. The nonclinical internship coordinator facilitates nonclinical internship informational meetings each semester with instructors.

In addition, interns participate in a 3-hour per week seminar that includes readings and 3 or 4 assigned papers. The seminar provides classroom instruction on beginning professional skills as well as discussion of interns various experiences at internship sites.

Credits and Field Placement Hours

Internship is offered for a total of 4, 5, 6, 7, or 8 credits. Internship students report that the more hours they put into their placement activities, the more they learn. Taking Psychology 793 for four credits typically does not permit the kind of site involvement that an 8-credit commitment permits.

For each credit, two hours of agency placement time is required in addition to the three-hour per week seminar. Thus, four credits equal eight hours of agency work per week or a minimum of 112 hours per semester; 6 credits equal 10 hours per week for a minimum of 168 hours per semester; 8 credits equal 16 hours per week or 224 hours per semester, etc. Travel time from home or UNH to the agency is not included in the placement hours, nor is at-home reading time. Only activities at the agency or other professional activities such as interagency meetings, etc. are included in the placement hours. A student who enrolls in nonclinical internship after the first week of classes or who, for whatever reasons, misses one or more scheduled days of work at the agency must make up the missed days, such that all of the required placement hours are completed by the last day of classes. Students who do not complete the required nonclinical internship hours by the last week of classes will receive an automatic F for the course. Please make sure that you are up to date with your hours and make up any missed time well before the end of the semester.

Some placements require a minimum involvement of more than eight credits per semester. In these instances, students can take eight credits of Nonclinical Internship combined with up to four credits of Independent Study. Prior approval by the instructor is necessary for such arrangements.

No more than two psychology 793 nonclinical interns per section may work at a particular agency during a given semester. This guideline serves the purpose of insuring that many different agencies are represented in the course. It is the responsibility of the potential intern to check with the agency and make certain that this guideline is observed. Exceptions to this guideline can be made by permission of the instructor.

Approval of Agency and Supervisor

Agencies that have never hosted a UNH psychology nonclinical intern, or that have not hosted an intern during the last three years, must be approved, or reapproved, by the nonclinical internship coordinator and psychology faculty. The instructor must receive, either from the student or prospective supervisor, a copy of the latter’s resume and a special brief form that, when completed, describes the nature of the agency and its suitability for hosting a UNH psychology intern. Copies of the Nonclinical Internship Site Approval form can be obtained from the Psychology Department office and are in Appendix B of this manual. Approval of the agency and supervisor by the instructor should be obtained before the learning agreement, described below, is submitted to the internship assistant.

Process of Obtaining an Internship and Registering for a Nonclinical Internship

To enroll in 793 students must set up an individual meeting with staff at the Career Services office at Hood House (862-2070 or wildcat.careers@unh.edu). Students should bring to this meeting a copy of their resume and be clear about which of the four core course areas they are interested in for a nonclinical internship. At the meeting they will work with career services staff to select three potential internship sites. Students then must contact the sites, set up an interview and obtain an internship. Once they have been offered an internship students will then complete a learning agreement with their site supervisor and submit it and a signed consent and release form to Robin Scholefield in the Psychology Department office in McConnell Hall.
Learning Agreement

By the announced deadline each semester, two copies of an agreement between the intern and supervisor, signed by both parties, must be submitted in typewritten form to Internship Assistant Robin Scholefield, McConnell Hall. The agreement should specify clearly all requirements of both the intern and the supervisor. In conjunction with the course syllabus, the agreement constitutes the working structure of the course. The learning agreement should not be considered inflexible. It can be revised/altered at any time by simply discussing the changes with the supervisor and submitting a copy of the proposed changes to the instructor for approval. Learning agreements generally are about two typewritten pages, plus or minus a paragraph or two. The following format is suggested:

Student Information. Student’s name, local address, email address, phone numbers (home and cell).

Course Information. Number of credit hours for the course; placement starting and stopping dates; weekly work schedule at agency.

Supervisor Information. Supervisor’s name, title, agency, agency address, email address, agency phone number, and times most easily reached. A copy of the supervisor’s resume should be attached if the Department does not have a current one on file. Check with the Internship Assistant to see if a copy of the resume must be included. The supervisor probably has one on hand. If not, the resume should include such relevant information as degree(s) earned, field in which degree was earned, previous work experiences, additional training, and type of current work and responsibilities. This information should be submitted to the Internship Assistant, Robin Scholefield.

Course Goals and Methods of Reaching Goals. The intern should give careful thought to what he or she wishes to learn and then discuss with the supervisor these wishes in the context of what can and cannot be taught in the field placement. Then, a list of goals, typically four to six in number, should be agreed upon along with activities designed to help the intern achieve each goal. In this way the intern and supervisor should be able to relate most of the intern’s activities and responsibilities to specific learning goals. Some examples follow:

Goal #1: To determine if I have the potential and interest to work in the area of sports psychology.

Activities: I will complete my eight hours per week working with the sports psychologist with the Boston Red Sox. I will observe the psychologist’s interactions and attend meetings and trainings pertaining to sports psychology.

Goal #2: To understand the relationship of sports psychology to the collegiate and professional sports field.

Activities: I will attend trainings specific to this area as offered by my internship site and interview a variety of professionals working both within sports psychology in my internship and in other professional areas.

Goal #3: To learn and understand how the sports psychologist interacts with other departments and specialists within the internship site.

Activities: Study and understand the organizational structure within my internship organization and how each department interacts and relates to the other. Clarify the role that sports psychology plays in this organization.

Goal #4: To learn and understand the major theories within the sports psychology field.

Activities: Attend supervisory meetings with my supervisor as well as develop a bibliography of appropriate readings.

The learning agreement can be altered at any time by the mutual consent of the supervisor and the intern and by sending a statement of the changes to the instructor.

Supervision. Describe the type (individual or group), frequency and length of meetings with the supervisor. This is a most important aspect of the learning agreement and should be spelled out clearly. If at all possible, indicate a specific meeting day and time (or times) each week.

Evaluations. The learning agreement should include a statement, initialed or signed by the supervisor and the student, indicating the supervisor agrees to submit both a mid-course evaluation containing an "estimated grade-so-far" and an end-of-course evaluation that includes a grade representing overall intern performance. One copy of these evaluations is to be sent to the instructor and a second copy presented to and discussed with the student. The copy sent to the instructor should be mailed in care of the Internship Secretary but with the instructor’s name on the envelope also.

In addition, the intern should make a statement regarding his or her intention to write at the end of the semester an evaluation of the internship experience that conveys impressions of the agency, overall quality of work performed there, and the quality and quantity of supervision received. For the dual purposes of maintaining a quality internship program and informing potential interns about various internship possibilities, interns are strongly encouraged to write candid evaluations. The evaluations will be read by the instructor and made available to students seeking information about agency placements. In some cases having an intern evaluate the agency and supervision might place the intern in a difficult, possibly compromising position. For this reason, the statement of intention to write an evaluation of the internship experience is not binding, and accordingly, the evaluation statement is not a requirement for successful completion of Psychology 741/791. Interns who do not wish to submit an evaluation of their agency must discuss this option with the course instructor.

Internship Consent and Release Form

Upon submission of a signed learning agreement to the Internship Assistant, Robin Schofield, students must also complete and sign nonclinical internship consent and release form (see appendix A). This document outlines the potential risks of the internship course and is signed by both the student and the internship instructor. Copies of the signed consent and release forms are then retained by the Internship Assistant.

Supervisor’s Responsibilities

In agreeing to supervise an intern the supervisor accepts two responsibilities: that he or she will 1) meet regularly with the intern and 2) assess the intern’s performance.
Meetings. The supervisor should arrange regular meetings, which allow for planning and monitoring of the intern’s work, and for answering the intern’s questions and concerns. The intern will generate a learning agreement from the initial planning sessions, which will formalize the semester’s activities. Subsequent meetings should provide the intern with opportunities to ask questions, to address any difficulties and problems encountered with clients or staff, and to receive feedback.

Part of the learning agreement may include a brief bibliography containing readings that familiarize the intern with agency treatment approaches, philosophy, research, types of clients served, and so on. The bibliography is brief, as the intern is expected to spend most of his/her time engaged in "hands on,” experiential learning.

Assessment of Intern Performance. The supervisor is responsible for writing two evaluations of the intern’s work, one at mid-term and the other toward the end of the semester. The most relevant criteria for such an evaluation will be the several goals included in the intern’s learning agreement. Other criteria might include goals stated in the initial paragraph of the Psychology 793 syllabus. Still other possible areas of evaluation include facility in dealing with clients or coworkers, use of constructive criticism, industry and curiosity, any special strengths and weaknesses, and so on. Supervisors should select criteria and guidelines they consider relevant for providing an evaluation appropriate for the particular setting and intern.

The supervisor is also expected to provide an estimated grade-so-far for the mid-semester evaluation and an end-of-semester grade for the final evaluation. The evaluation must be reviewed with the student and signed by the site supervisor and the student. The supervisor should send the completed mid-semester evaluation to the instructor by the second Monday of October or first Monday of March, and the end-of-semester evaluation by the first Monday of December or last Monday of April. Approximately 40 percent of the final course grade is based on the end-of-semester grade provided by the internship supervisor.

Seminar

Interns attend a weekly seminar conducted at UNH. The seminar provides a learning setting where students acquire basic professional skills, discuss common difficulties and concerns, and both give and receive personal and professional support. Attendance at the seminar is required. Participation in the seminar and related assignments count for about 60 percent of the final course grade.

Grading Guidelines for Site Supervisors

A quality work demonstrates a very high level of understanding and engagement with work and learning activities. Students go “above and beyond” what is asked or required of them. They are good at asking questions and demonstrate an excellent level of professionalism. The student has completed all required internship hours. The student makes excellent use of supervision hours and relationships with other staff members to enhance their learning and improve their quality of their work with clients. Student is willing and able to learn from their mistakes.

B work demonstrates an awareness of what is expected of them. The student completes the basic goals outlined on their learning agreement. The student makes good use of supervision but may demonstrate more limited understanding of issues that arise and how to handle them. The student has completed all internship hours. Student is able to learn from their mistakes.

C work describes students who have not fulfilled or are not adequately making progress on all outlined learning goals due to their own motivation or initiative (we realize sometimes learning goals developed earlier need to change due to needs of the agency, etc.). The student’s level of initiative or motivation is adequate but not outstanding. Student may have some difficulty in willingness or ability to learn from mistakes and in their use of supervision. Student has completed all required internship hours.

D/F work is deficient and fails to demonstrate progress on any learning goals outlined. Student has frequent absences and has not completed all required internship hours. Student misses supervision appointments. Student does not behave professionally and does not make changes when given feedback from supervisor or staff at the agency.

Sample Learning Agreement

Learning Agreement for Student X at Service Animal Trainers

Student Intern Name: Student X
Date: March 10, 2014
Internship Site: Service Animal Trainers
Address of internship site: 16 Pleasant Street, Madison, New Hampshire
Internship site supervisor: Barbara Blasé, M.S.W.
Phone and email contact for site supervisor: 603-867-5309

Internship Goals

Goal #1: To determine if I have the potential and interest to become an effective animal behaviorist.
Activities: I shall work as an intern with 3 to 5 training animals at Service Animal Trainers. This will involve seeing each animal for 1/2 hour per day, 2 days per week. These contacts will be directed toward establishing rapport with the animals, helping them to better interact with staff and other humans, helping them to leave the institution to train in the community, and moving toward eventual placement with a client with an identified disability. My supervisor will help me address questions and problems I encounter while engaging in these activities.

Goal #2: To understand the relationship between funding for service animals and needs in the community.
Activities: I shall seek information on joint planning between Service Animal Trainers and community agencies by attending inter-agency conference, and by interviewing directors of community relations, admissions, client follow-up services, and public relations.

Goal #3: To learn and understand how Service Animal Trainers is funded and the area of grant writing. To determine whether or not I want grant writing to be part of my future (i.e., career).
Activities: I will speak with primary grant writers at my agency and reviews grants submitted by the agency. I will interview staff as to their training in the grant-writing field.

Goal #4: To learn and understand the specific animal behavior training model.
Activities: I will be attending training sessions every Tuesday and review training charts every Wednesday. I will complete reading specific to animal training as recommended by my supervisor.

The learning agreement can be altered at any time by the mutual consent of the supervisor and the intern and by sending a statement of the changes to the instructor.

Supervision. Student X and Site Supervisor will meet for a half hour of individual supervision at 10 am on Tuesday mornings. In addition, Student X will attend group supervision meetings once a month for one hour.

Evaluations. The site supervisor, insert site supervisor name here, agrees to submit a mid-course evaluation containing an "estimated grade-so-far" and an end-of-course evaluation that includes a grade representing overall intern performance. One copy of these evaluations is to be sent to the instructor and a second copy presented to and discussed with the student. The copy sent to the instructor via post mail to the instructor at the Psychology Department, McConnell Hall, University of New Hampshire, Durham, NH 03824.
