UNH WOMEN'S STUDIES NEWSLETTER

307A Dimond Library - UNH - 862-2194

The Women's Studies Program Newsletter is usually published monthly. We welcome announcements or articles from faculty, staff, students, and just about anyone else who sends us something. The deadline for submitting your contributions to the newsletter is the 15th of each month during the academic year.

Further information on any item in the newsletter is available in the Women's Studies Program Office, 307A Dimond Library. Office hours are Monday through Friday, 10:00-5:00. Closed: 12:00-1:00. Members of the Women's Studies staff include Cathryn Adamsky (Coordinator), Maria Russell (Editor), Joe Jillette, Chris Russell and Linda Pitman.

The Women's Studies Office maintains a library of books, periodicals, resource files, and a file of grants and fellowships available to women. A bibliography of books about women and women's issues which are available at the UNH library is available in the office. Anyone is welcome to stop by and look over what we have. Some of our periodicals are unique and not to be found elsewhere at UNH.

November 17 Monday 8:00 PM
SANDRA HARDING, Professor of Philosophy and Director of Women's Studies at the University of Delaware will speak on "The Science Question in Feminism." In this talk she will discuss how science as a socially produced body of knowledge and a cultural institution is affected by the dominant characteristics of cultural experience and the relevance of this to science as a practice and body of knowledge.
McConnell 208-209.

November 18 Tuesday 12:30-2:00
SANDRA HARDING. Professor Harding will present a workshop entitled "Taking the Sex Out of Science", to which you are cordially invited.
Attendance at the workshop is limited, so kindly let us know as soon as possible whether you will be able to participate by calling the Women's Studies Office (862-2194). The workshop will pursue issues raised in her lecture the previous evening. It will also deal with the types of critiques which have been made by feminists of science and explore pathways to developing a gender neutral science.

Professor Harding is the author of the recently published book The Science Question in Feminism and editor of the forthcoming books Feminism and Methodology and Sex and Scientific Inquiry (co-edited with Jean O'Barr). She has published extensively on the philosophy of science and holds a joint appointment with the Department of Sociology at the University of Delaware.
Her visit here is co-sponsored by the Technology, Science and Values Program, The Women's Studies Program, The UNH Association for Women in Science, and the Society for Values in Higher Education. It is supported by Sigma X's Committee on Science and Society, the Office of the Vice President for Academic Affairs, the Undesignated Gifts Committee, the College of Engineering and Physical Sciences and the College of Liberal Arts. It is part of a larger program on women, gender and science.

ALL THE WORLD'S A STAGE

From the Boston Globe, Sept. 21, 1986:

Kids Learn About Stage: The Boy Must be Taller. Some boys were too short. Tall willowy Patsy Culbert, who was auditioning the children, was sympathetic but realistic. It's a theatrical convention, she said, that on stage boys must be taller than girls, or look at least as tall.

ON THE CAMPUS

Student Evaluations: Unfair to Women? Once again another study has confirmed that women faculty are consistently rated more negatively than their male counterparts in students evaluations. Researchers at Lafayette College (PA) found that not only male students but female students as well seemed to be bias against women professors. Susan A. Basow and Nancy T. Silberg examined a number of sex role variables and discuss their importance in predicting teacher evaluations. The study also contains a short list of references which would be useful to those researching this subject. Copies of "Student Evaluations of College Professors: Are Males Prejudiced Against Women Professors?" are available from Susan A. Basow, Psychology Department, Lafayette College, Easton, PA 18048.

SO WHAT ELSE IS NEW?

The results of the sixth annual salary survey in Working Woman are in, and unfortunately, are no surprise; executive, management and administrative women receive 37% less in salary than men in equal positions. The survey, based on information from the Bureau of Labor Statistics, found that:

female economists earned only 57.6% of the salaries male economists earned;
female computer science analysts earned 78% of what men earned;
female engineers earned 82.9% of what men earned;
female teachers, other than college professors, earned 86.3% of what men earned.
female psychologists earned 87.8% of what men earned; and even in the traditionally-female occupation of nursing, men earned more (0.3) than women.

A limited number of copies of the January 1986 issue of Working Woman magazine are available free by writing to Louise washer, Editorial Department, Working Woman, 342 Madison Ave., New York, NY 10173.
