Educational Studies Dual Major*

The B.A. in educational studies: equity, diversity and inclusion program is for students committed to making a difference as teachers in elementary schools. The program leads to dual certification in elementary education and English for Speakers of Other Languages. Or, if you are interested in teaching dance or theatre, math, music, preK-3, or health and physical education, a bachelor's degree program including a one-semester student-teaching requirement will allow you to be recommended for licensure in these specialized areas. In our dual major program, broaden your education through focused exploration and application of educational studies. Many professions that communicate information and work for social change at any scale have an inherent educational aspect, and this major will provide the tools you'll need to be effective.

PROGRAM HIGHLIGHTS

100 years of experience — a leader in educating teachers and addressing critical educational issues for over 100 years

Seacoast Reads — a volunteer opportunity that helps regional elementary and middle school students improve their reading and writing skills

Engagement — benefit from dozens of collaborative relationships with regional schools and community agencies, as well as international partnerships.

TOPICS YOU MAY STUDY

- Children's literature in a diverse world
- Disability in inclusive schools and communities
- Education, poverty and development
- Language and linguistic diversity in schools
- Public issues, democratic schooling and active citizenship in a global context
- Racial and social justice in education
- Social change and education

A dual major must be paired with another major of any discipline. The dual major can lead to certification depending on the subject area of the primary major.*

“My mind and my heart were both shaped by the classes I attended, the people I met, and the experiences I had. I can’t express enough how much I loved my four years at UNH. I think UNH has to be the best teaching school in the State.”
